ACADEMY WELCOMES TWO NEW TRUSTEES

PHILADELPHIA — The Academy of Natural Sciences, the oldest natural science research institution and museum in the Americas, is pleased to welcome two new members to its governing body.

Kathryn Smith Frorer, of Bryn Mawr, and Kenneth J. Warren, of Haverford, are the newest members of the Board of Trustees.

Frorer graduated from the Wharton School, University of Pennsylvania, and received an M.B.A in finance from the University of California, Berkeley. She was employed by Goldman Sachs & Co. Inc, and Dakin Securities before joining Rosenberg Capital. In 1993, she and her husband, Peter, founded Frorer Partners, an investment company. She raised three children and ran a profitable yoga studio before moving back to the Philadelphia area last year.

Warren is an environmental lawyer with more than 25 years of experience. He graduated from Brown University and earned a law degree from the University of Pennsylvania Law School. He counsels clients on environmental matters including compliance, remediation and alternative energy. He is listed in the leading national and international guides of lawyers for environmental law and was chair of the American Bar Association's Section of Environment, Energy and Resources in 2003-04. He was appointed to the Environmental Protection Agency's National Environmental Justice Advisory Council 2000-06. He writes a regular column for The Legal Intelligencer.

"Kathy and Ken bring expertise and enthusiasm and are great assets for the Academy as it approaches its 200th birthday in 2012," said Academy Board Chairman R. James Macaleer.
